ABOUT G-PHEC 2026

The Global Public Health and Epidemiology Congress (G-PHEC 2026 – Hybrid Event) is a prestigious international platform committed to advancing knowledge, research, and collaboration in the fields of public health and epidemiology. Scheduled to take place from September 21-23, 2026, in the dynamic city of London, United Kingdom, this congress is meticulously designed to bring together leading public health experts, epidemiologists, researchers, policymakers, healthcare professionals, academicians, and industry leaders from across the globe. With a strong focus on both in-person and virtual participation, G-PHEC 2026 embraces a hybrid model to ensure maximum accessibility and inclusivity, thereby fostering cross-continental dialogue and collaborative innovation in real-time.

The G-PHEC 2026 congress will feature a comprehensive scientific program encompassing keynote lectures, oral and poster presentations, expert panels, workshops, and roundtable discussions. Topics will span a wide range of areas including infectious disease surveillance, non-communicable disease trends, environmental health, biostatistics, health policy, health equity, global health strategies, digital health, outbreak preparedness, and pandemic response. Attendees will gain access to cutting-edge research, policy updates, and evidence-based practices that are shaping the future of public health. G-PHEC 2026 also serves as an ideal venue for early-career researchers and students to present their work and engage with global mentors, while institutional and industry partners can showcase new technologies, public health interventions, and collaborative opportunities. With its thoughtfully curated agenda, global speaker lineup, and interactive formats, G-PHEC 2026 is poised to be an essential destination for thought leadership and action in public health.
